Not illustrated. 1804 Excerpt: . is produced by the collision of flint and steel. That they are particles of quartz cannot be doubted; but to suppose them combined with oxygen is contrary to all experience; for these stones never shew any disposition to combine with oxygen even when exposed to the most violent heat. La Metberie made experiments on purpose to see whether Lamanon's opinion was well founded; but they all turned out unfavourable to it. And Monge ascertained, that the particles described by Lamanon were pure crystal unaltered, with a quantity of black powder adhering to them. He concludes, accordingly that these fragments had been raised to so high a temperature during their passage through the air, that they set fire to all the minute bodies that came in their way. The emission of the light is accompanied by a very peculiar smell, having some analogy to...
